TO HAVE UNIFORMS OF GRAY. Officers of the First Regiment Posttively Decide This Matter.

The line officers of the First Virginia Regiment met at the Armory last night and adopted a new uniform, which will be supplied to the men as quickly as possible. It is to be of Confederate gray, and similar in style to that of the Seventh The commandants of the companies were constituted a committee, with Colo-nel Jones as chairman, to devise ways and means to obtain the new uniform, and it is feit that with some assistance from the citizens of Richmond, the "Old First" will be wearing the gray by its next anniversary, October 19th.

The uniform consists of a gray dress coat, gray trousers, white cross and waist belts, white epaulets for the men, gold shoulder-knots for the officers, black shakes, with white pempoms for enlisted men, and black plumes, similar to those worn by the West Point cadets, for the officers. The uniform will be one of the smartest and most attractive worn by the militia in the country.
